Caps for sale craft ideas

There are a number of places you can get craft wood, with prices starting at free and going on up. However, free hard wood isn't free after you add on the value of your time to process it and the wear and tear on your tools, according to Tool Crib.Buying Wholesale Craft WoodIf you want to run a craft business, buying craft wood at wholesale is a way to increase your profit margin. You get the wood to create your projects at a discounted price, and then sell your finished crafts at a profit. To find craft wood from wholesalers, open your favorite search engine and search for wholesale craft wood suppliers. You may find a wholesaler nearby, or you may have to shop using a website to get the wood you need at a reduced price.Wood Pallets for CraftingIt takes a lot of work to break down a pallet into usable craft wood, according to Tool Crib. The advantages are that a lot of companies give free pallets away to unload them, so your sweat-equity may be your only investment. To get pallets, go into any factory or store that gets shipments in on pallets, and ask if they throw away their pallets. If they do, ask if you can get them to use for woodworking projects.Ask in Facebook GroupsSearch Facebook for a yard sale or garage sale group in your area, and ask to join. When you're a member, then you can post your request for wood, such as pallets, old barn siding or any other type of wood you can use in your crafts, according to Hoosier Homemade. Expect to have to pay something, but on occasion you may also find free craft wood using Facebook groups.Old FurnitureThrift shops often have old furniture at low prices, and you can buy an old table, chair or picture frame for a low price. Then, you can tear the furniture apart to harvest the wood so you can recycle it into a unique new craft project. Sometimes, you can also find old discarded furniture along the road, and if you just need it for the craft wood, Tool Crib says it's a way to get free materials for your handiwork.Lumber Yards and Woodworking BusinessesBusiness that do woodworking, like lumberyards, often have a lot of small pieces of waste wood. To find out if you can buy some of the scraps, contact the office and describe what you do and how much wood you want to buy. Dumpster-diving for pieces of wood at these locations is another option if you prefer to try to get the wood scraps for free after they're thrown away. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Showing 1 - 5 of 107 reviewsThis system has benefited us so much at McDonalds, because it helps keeps us organized and up to date with everything that we may need help with or inventory on. It also makes it a lot easy for our crew too. The most that I like about this software is that I am able to manage everything on this system at McDonald's. I can check times, check products and look at all the orders they had came through that day. Also with this system you are able to do schedules and make sure that the inventory is put in. With this system you can do just about anything even knowing the total sales for that day and month. This system helps keep everything together. The only thing that I did not like was the fact that sometimes when I was trying to do an order, it automatically started rebooting itself and doing an update. It did not happen too often. I have enjoyed using POS Nation. With each fix or call to the tech team, I learn the system more and more. The POS Nation employees have been wonderful, and the hardware has held up well for the time we have had it.I enjoyed the setup process. The instructor was great to work with, and very informative. The features within the system fit just about any scenario we run into. The ease of learning the system was also a relief. I will occasionally run into issues finding the correct reports to run for specific information. Also, I have experienced "speed" issues with the system taking many seconds to finish transactions and open the drawer. However, both of these issues are resolved fairly quickly after calling customer support.We have Toast in our Restaurant program. Their poor hardware performance and lack of customer service dissuaded us from pursuing any further business with them.Inventory and reporting capabilities. Also, to get with a more modern system.We're happy you're enjoying your system, Sean! Thanks for the review.The promised ability to use my existing hardware which was not possible with any other grocery specific POS program.It was not specific to the grocery industry and is not flexible in changing to changing needs within the grocery industry. For example, when an additional tax was imposed for telecommunication cards this program did not have the ability to differentiate it which would be required in order for me to report taxes to the state. Also, my own personal, custom gift cards cannot be processed through the system nor can I scan and process Major gift cards through this program.The promised ability to use my existing hardware which didn't work out in the end and when it wouldn't run well on my equipment I had to replace most of it which in the end was more expensive than a grocery industry specific program that I would have been much better off with.Lorraine, We are sorry to hear you have not had a good experience in regards to some areas within our software. Please give us a call at your earliest convenience so that we can assist you at 704-405-5089.Inventory is a breeze and balancing is a breeze!The ease of use! I, the owner, and my staff love how easy it is to ring up customers!I did not have any adverse things to say! It's perfect!Because we loved our old out dated one and couldn't wait for the new one! [SENSITIVE CONTENT HIDDEN] , our delightful Customer Success Manager, has been by our side since day one helping us get our new POS system up and running. We have found the software rather intuitive and easy to use so far. Right now I am having a difficult time getting data I need from the Reports. This may be due to my inexperience with the new system. I made the switch from QuickBooks POS due to poor support. When you are running a retail business, and have an issue with your POS, you need help right away or you lose customers. Carol, We are glad to hear that you enjoyed your experience with your Customer Success Manager, and that he represented POS Nation well. We look forward to working with you again soon! Fill in the signs with anything you would like. Member's Paper Plate Monkey Craft and Bulletin Board Display This monkey measures almost three feet from the tip of the tail to the end of the banana. It would be great for a bulletin board display. What you will need: Brown, Tan, Pink, and Black Acrylic Paint Two Dinner-sized Paper Plate (10 1/4") Three Snack-sized Paper Plates Brown Construction Paper to Match the Brown Paint Yellow Card Stock Scissors Glue How to make the Paper Plate Monkey Craft: 1. Paint two dinner-sized plates brown. Cut arms, legs, ears, and a tail from brown construction paper and glue them the top of one of the plates. Glue the plates together top-to-top. Member's 2. Cut two ears from construction paper and glue them to one of the snack-sized plates. Glue another plate on top of that plate to make the head. 3. Fold another snack-sized plate in half and glue it to the head to make the monkey's mouth. 4. Paint the head brown with tan around the eyes and the mouth and tan with red or pink on the inside for the mouth. Glue the head to the body. 5. Cut banana shapes from yellow construction paper or card stock. Bulletin Board Ideas Going Bananas for Math 1. Write math facts on one side of the bananas and the answer on the other. Show your children the math fact. If a child knows the answer to the math fact he gets to tape the banana to the display, placing it in the monkey's mouth, hands, feet, or where ever he would like. 2. Demonstrate fractions using parts of bananas. Monkeying Around with Words 1. Have your children write words they don't know on the front of the bananas and the definition on the other side. 2. Write spelling words on the bananas. Ask your children to spell the words. If a child knows the answer or the spells a word correctly, he or she gets to tape the banana to the display, placing it in the monkey's mouth, hands, feet, or where ever he would like. 3. Write vocabulary words on the bananas. Ask your children to give the definition of the words. If a child knows the definition, he or she gets to tape the banana to the display, placing it in the monkey's mouth, hands, feet, or where ever he would like. Monkey Business Have your children write facts about monkeys on the bananas. Don't Leave the Monkey Hanging - Complete the Sentence Write the beginning of a sentence on a banana and place it in the monkey's mouth. Have your children finish the sentence on the banana and tape them to the display. "Ten Naughty Little Monkeys" by Suzanne Williams There are Ten Naughty Little Monkeys but one is the naughtiest of them all. This story doesn't tell why the little monkeys are always getting hurt, but look at the pictures and you will soon discover who is the naughtiest little monkey of all. After reading the story through once, go back and look at each picture and have your children try to figure out why each monkey got hurt. Ask your children why they think the naughtiest little monkey did the naughty things she did. Also ask them how they think the naughty little monkey might have felt if one the other monkeys got hurt badly because of her actions. Talk about what the word consequence means and how the consequences of our actions affects others and ourselves. Have your children look at the facial expressions of each monkey and ask them what they think the monkey might be thinking or feeling. Encourage your children to draw monkey faces on snack- sized paper plates with different facial expressions. Label the expressions such as happy, sad, surprised, confused, scared, etc. Then make a bulletin board display of the monkey faces. Monkey Idioms Read children's stories about monkeys. (See "Ten Naughty Little Monkeys" and "Caps for Sale"). Tell your children that not everything we say means exactly what it sounds like. Idioms are expressions that don't necessarily mean what the words say. The phrase "monkey business" is an idiom. Ask them what they think the expression means in the following sentence. "Mother told her children to stop the monkey business before someone got hurt." "Monkey business" is silliness or dishonest behavior. Ask your children how they think this idiom got started. Discuss other monkey idioms - Greece monkey, monkey business, monkeying around, monkey wrench, etc. Monkey Door Hanger Craft What you will need: Heavy Card Stock Scissors String Crayons or Markers Hole Punch How to make the Monkey Door Hanger: 1. Print out the pattern onto heavy card stock. Member's Free Digital Download 2. Cut out the door hanger and color it. 3. Cut a slit just above the monkeys lower hand. 4. Make different signs from the left over card stock that you cut away from the pattern that the monkey can hold. Punch holes on the top of the card and tie a string to the signs. Place one of the signs in the Monkey's hand and hang it on your door. © 2008, Digital by Design, Inc. - See Copyright Information Good Books About Monkeys Caps for Sale: A Tale of a Peddler, Some Monkeys and Their Monkey Business - Esphyr Slobodkina Caps for Sale: A Tale of a Peddler, Some Monkeys and Their Monkey Business A peddler learns what the phrase "Monkey See, Monkey Do" means in this delightful, simple story. He's not like other peddlers who carry their wares on their backs, he walks around with a stack of hats on his head that he has for sale. One morning he isn't able to sell a single hat so he decides to take a nap. When he wakes up the caps are gone and he soon discovers they are on the heads sixteen chattering monkeys. The peddler tries everything he can think of to get his hats back, he shakes his fingers, stomps his foot, and then both feet, but instead of giving the peddler his hats back the monkeys just mimic everything he says. Finally he is so angry that he throws his hat down and begins to walk away. As he is walking away he sees the monkeys take off the hats and throw them to the ground. This is when he realizes that he has to do what he wants the monkey's to do and gets his hats back. "Me . . . Jane" by Patrick McDonnell "Me . . . Jane" The story of Jane Goodall for Children. This is a simple yet endearing story of Jane Goodall. It tells of her love for chimpanzees at an young age, and how she followed her dreams to live in Africa and help the chimpanzees there. The illustrations are cartoonish and childlike and set the magical mood for the story. A short biography of Jane Goodall is included in the back of the book. Your children will love this book! "Caps for Sale" Learning Activities History Lesson Ask your children what they think a peddler is after reading the story. Explain that this story was written in 1938, quite a long time ago when things were a little different. A peddler was someone who would sell things by walking from one house to another, knocking on the door, showing his wares, and trying to get the person at home to buy them. A peddler could also just stand on a street corner in a busy city and yell out that he had things to sell trying to get the attention of people who were walking down the street. Today we have door to door salesmen but most of the time they don't bring the things they are selling. Instead, they might bring a picture and description of the things they are selling or they may be selling a service, then they will try to get you to sign up for that service. Ask your children the following questions: 1. Have ever had a door to door salesman at your house? 2. What was the salesman trying to sell? Some examples might be: magazines, cable service, cleaning services, maintenance services such as yard work, etc. 3. Have you ever gone door to door trying to sell something? 4. Did you like selling things door to door? 5. Why do you think that there aren't many door to door salesmen today? 6. Do you think that the peddler in the story would be able to sell his caps today? Physical Fitness Learning Activities Have your children count the caps on the peddler's head. Ask them if they think it would be hard to carry that many caps on your head. Have your children practice carrying caps or other soft things on their heads like the peddler in the story. See who can carry the most without dropping them, and who can sit down and get back up without dropping the hats. Math Learning Activities The peddler was selling his caps for fifty cents apiece. Look up the price of caps on the Internet and have your child figure out what the difference in price is from the story and today. Remind your children that this story was published in 1940. Ask them how many years ago that was and what was the percentage of increase of the price of hats from 1940 to today. Listening Skills After reading the story ask your children the following questions to see how well they listened to the story. You can make it a contest and give the child who knew the most answers an award for best listener. 1. What made this peddler different from other peddlers? 2. What did he have for sale? 3. What were the colors of the hats on his head in order from top to bottom? 4. Why did he walk slow? 5. How long did he sleep? 6. What did the peddler see in the tree? 7. What did the monkey's do when he shook his fingers at them? 8. What was the last thing the peddler did before getting his hats back? "Monkey See, Monkey Do" Craft Stick Monkey Puppet and Learning Activity What to do: 1.Before class print out the and cut them out. Member's Instant Download Pattern $2.00 - 2. In class have your children color the monkey heads (one smiling with eyes open and one with it's eyes closed) and glue them back to back onto the end of a jumbo craft stick. Show them how to wind pipe cleaners around the craft stick to make arms and hands. They may also want to add legs using more Chenille stems. 3. Tell your children that they can use the arms and hands to show how we place our hands together to pray. 4. Use this craft with the following suggested books. 5. Have your children practice copying each other. Have one child move the arm and/or legs of his monkey stick puppet and have the other children try to copy the puppet using their own puppets. They may also want to use sounds and movements. Monkey See, Monkey Do Children's Books
